For more than 45 years, The Gallery at Tree's Place has been considered by many realist painters and collectors to be one the leading dealers of representational paintings in the nation. Tree's is the proud home to some of the pre-eminent living painters working in the genre: Patrick Kitson, Sarah Lamb, Michael Whelan, Richard Loud, Kathy Anderson, Gary Akers, and Carlo Russo, among many others. The gallery is located in a spacious 19th-century

“The summer season on Cape Cod is always strong for art sales, and we anticipate that this one will be no different. From June through October, there is a steady stream of collectors and visitors who are looking to bring home a treasure or two from their visit. Our exceptional repertoire of artists brings repeat business year after year from patrons who know that The Gallery at Tree's Place is known as the finest art gallery on Cape Cod,” says Mike Donovan, owner of the gallery. “In 2015, sales were strong throughout the season...In terms of price points, the $5,000 to $10,000 levels continue to be the strongest with some interest at higher levels.”

There will be four exhibitions during July and August, beginning with Caught in an Instant from July 2 to 15 with work by Kim English, Mark Beck, and Gwen Marcus. July 16 through 29 will be Singularities featuring husband-and-wife artists James Neil Hollingsworth and Karen Hollingsworth. The group exhibition It's All in the Details featuring Kitson, Robert Bolster, and woodcarver Eric Kaiser happens July 30 to August 12. Then, from August 13 through 26 will be Kindred Spirits, Artistic Souls with Whelan and Michael J. Mariano, who plan to collaborate on a few paintings, with a demonstration scheduled for the opening on August 13 from 5 to 7 p.m.
